"The cause why that the cleares (ie. the amounts removed) of Sheffield Pittes are not so much this last yeare (2 Oct.1630 - 2 Oct 1631) as they have beene the years before may appeare as followeth" - Totley and Whiteley Wood pits produced a great deal also there was a milder winter. The coal in stock was of poor quality and people would not buy. Corn has been dear therefore "manie people was constrained to sitt with small fires rather then want bread; besides the great decay of the cutler trade which never was knowne to be so badde as this yeare! 	the Sheffield area and shortly before his death he received a grant of arms as a person of £1,000 per annum estate. As Arundel's Bailiff he had been in a particularly favoured position for absorbing estates sloughed off by the Howards and the Shrewsbuy Trustees in the years before 1640. Stephen Bright seems to have carried on an extensive trade as a lead merchant. It would appear that at least some of the lead ore was smelted into pigs at Beauchief and Totley. (see 1641 and 42) John Bright seems to have followed his father's business and to have maintained it during the Civil War but his more lucrative business was the coal pit/s at Handsworth. The basis of the estates belonging to the Brights was that just as his father James(?) had been able as Bailiff to take advantage of the Arundel break-up in the years before 1640 so John the son especially benefited by the Civil War's revolution in land tenure as he was from the earliest days of the war, a member of the committee for sequestering "delinquents" estates. *Stephen Bright took over Old Hay Mill at this time.

1691	A true and perfect inventory of all and singular the goods, chattels of Strelley Pegge late of Beauchief Hall in the County of Derby, deceased, taken, valued and appraised the 14 th Day of December Anno Domini, one thousand six hundred and ninety one, by Thomas Burley, John Rotherham Jnr., Godfrey Webster and Charles Dixon as followeth - At Strawberry Lee Item, seaven score weathers (castrated rams) and seventy five ewes - or £53 . 10 . 6. Item, hey (hay) there - £3 . 6 . 8. Item, one cow in calv'd (in calf) £2 . 10 . 0. Although the greater part of the walled-in land at Strawberry Lee (now about 90 acres) probably was cleared and almost certainly walled in later than 1691 and the rudely shaped fields are earlier than the Totley Act of 1839, it is apparent that cleared land and haymaking was common at Strawberry Lee before 1691 and the Blackamoor pasturage good for sheep.
